In 1941, a musical group of labor activists known as "The Almanac Singers" climbed into a midnight blue Buick and blazed a trail across the USA, spreading the gospel of unionism and bringing folk music back to the people. The group, with members Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Lee Hays and Mill Lampell, created a new kind of topical music, using old folk melodies to tell the stories of the times. At the core were some of the greatest labor songs ever written, including "Union Maid," "Talking Union," and "Which Side Are You On?"

Some seventy years later, with the help and guidance of Pete Seeger and The Woody Guthrie Archives, two modern-day troubadours are following in the footsteps of the old Almanacs. George Mann and Rik Palieri released "The Almanac Trail" CD in July.

Join half of this talented team, guitarist George Mann, in an evening of songs from this historic tour, and his own songs of struggle, peace and reflections on life. Michael Bonti, a beloved local musician and longtime member of The New Century Singers, will open the program.
